

David Shrigley

David Shrigley was certainly an inspiration for the way I created the rubbish and the man versus the rat illustrations, especially when I began drawing them before adding colour. I really like the fact that although his work is so simple, they still have character, style and humour. I also like the way it is just drawn without being edited. This gets a joke or an observation across clearly and quickly without being too complicated, and I think it creates a bigger impact.

Michael Sieben

Michael Sieben is an American artist who usually creates artwork for skateboards. His work is a great example of the similar type of medium that I am using to create my own work, which is mostly created and edited on the computer. The artist uses thick lines and fills them in with strong colours, and creates different types of imagined characters which have a very cartoonish look to them. The pictures often give a chilled out feeling with calm expressions and laid-back poses, which could express the artist's personality or day to day life.

Marisa Hopkins

Marisa Hopkins is a freelance print designer based in London. I chose to look at this artist because I wanted to find an artist who does floral patterns, which could inspire different designs for a Hawaiian pattern that would look like it belonged on a shirt. Most of her work includes bright colours, but colours that are not too intense, which I think the colours in my work were at first.

References

- Alex Gamsu Jenkins. (2017). Alex Gamsu Jenkins. [online] Available at: <https://www.alexgamsujenkins.com/> [Accessed 7 May 2017].
- David Shrigley. (2017). Drawing & Painting Archives - David Shrigley. [online] Available at: <http://davidshrigley.com/category/drawing-painting/> [Accessed 7 May 2017].
- Kisner, J. (2016). Man v rat: could the long war soon be over? | Jordan Kisner. [online] the Guardian. Available at: <https://www.theguardian.com/science/2016/sep/20/man-v-rat-war-could-the-long-war-soon-be-over> [Accessed 7 May 2017].
- Marisahopkins.com. (2017). marisahopkins.com. [online] Available at: <http://marisahopkins.com/> [Accessed 7 May 2017].
- Msieben.com. (2017). Michael Sieben. [online] Available at: <https://www.msieben.com/> [Accessed 7 May 2017].